Dear TANYA CHAWLA,

On behalf of the Board of Directors and Staff of the Behavior Analyst Certification Board® (BACB®), please accept our congratulations on passing the RBT examination. If you have a qualified RBT Requirements Coordinator or RBT Supervisor on record with the BACB, you may begin representing yourself as a Registered Behavior Technician or as an RBT. If not, please know that you may not practice until your RBT Requirements Coordinator or RBT Supervisor is on record with the BACB.

Maintaining your Certification. To bill, practice, or represent yourself as an RBT, you must:

- Have an RBT Requirements Coordinator or RBT Supervisor on record with the BACB;
- Follow the RBT supervision requirements (<https://www.bacb.com/maintain/maintaining-rbt>);
- Renew your credential on a yearly basis (your certification has a one-year renewal cycle that extends from 2021-06-27 through 2022-06-27); and
- Adhere to the RBT ethics requirements (<https://www.bacb.com/ethics/ethics-code>).

If you need to take a break from maintaining your certification when you are not practicing, you may apply for Voluntary Inactive Status.

Account Management. You can manage your account information and apply for renewal online in your BACB Account.

Verification of RBT Status. To show others that you are certified as an RBT, you may display this certificate letter or provide copies to consumers and employers as long as you only do so when your certification is active (including having an RBT Requirements Coordinator or RBT Supervisor on file with the BACB). Your certification status may be verified by the BACB at any time and, when your certification is active, your information will appear on the RBT Registry.

Remaining Up-to-Date. You are responsible for periodically reviewing bacb.com/rbt to ensure that you are continuing to meet current RBT requirements. Please add bacb.com your contact list, address book, or list of “safe senders” to ensure that important messages from the BACB are received. Among the correspondence you will receive from us is our newsletter, which we only publish when there is important information to share.

Reporting Critical Events to the BACB. You are responsible for providing the BACB with timely notification of changes in your contact information, RBT Requirements Coordinator or RBT Supervisor, or any compliance issues involving the BACB’s ethical standards (e.g., if you are involved in a disciplinary action, legal suit, complaint or investigation).

Once again, congratulations on your new certification and welcome to the profession.

Sincerely,
